

A Philosophical Inquiry

God as the Sum of All Perspectives

A theory of God without being, will, or moral authority

The Problem with Traditional God

I do not understand God as a being, a will, or a moral authority.

I do not understand God as someone who listens, intervenes, forgives, or plans.

Those ideas collapse too quickly into comfort, fear, or self-projection.
They fail under pressure.

What I am trying to articulate is stricter and less consoling.

Why These Definitions Fail

- God as being — collapses into anthropomorphism, a projection of human qualities onto the infinite
- God as will — introduces intention where there may be only structure, preference where there must be neutrality
- God as moral authority — becomes a tool for power, a way to justify human systems under divine mandate
- God as intervener — creates impossible expectations, then disappointment when the world proceeds according to its own logic

The Gyre: Structure Without Resolution

A gyre is not balance. It is not equilibrium.

It is two opposing forces spiraling through each other over time, never canceling, never resolving.

Expands

One cone opens outward, reaching toward possibility

Contracts

The other draws inward, holding to what is known

One dominates, then yields. Meaning, identity, culture, and history do not progress in straight lines. They rotate under pressure.

The gyre is not a symbol of everything. It is a constraint that appears wherever contradiction must persist without collapse.

03

Where Meaning Coheres

Living at the Intersection

Where the two cones intersect, something momentarily coheres.

A Self

A Decision

A Culture

A Work of Art

This is where we live.

Opposing Forces Acting Through the Body

Memory — Possibility

Order — Disruption

Belonging — Truth

I do not experience reality as a stable ground. I experience it as a crossing.

No choice is made outside this tension. Every decision is a local resolution, provisional and costly.

From Personal to Collective

If this is true at the scale of a person, it is also true at the scale of a society.

Tradition ↔ Revolution

Not opposites that defeat each other, but paired forces rotating through time.

- What hardens eventually fractures
- What fractures eventually organizes

The pattern repeats, not because of fate or design, but because systems that remember while adapting have no other geometry available to them.

The Same Structure

Individual

Memory vs. Possibility
Order vs. Disruption
Belonging vs. Truth

Society

Tradition vs. Revolution
Structure vs. Change
Continuity vs. Transformation

Individuals and societies are not different kinds of things.

They are different scales of the same problem.

05

The Precise Definition

God as Totality

God is not inside the gyre.

God is not one side of it.

God is not the point of intersection.

God is the totality of all gyres taken together.

The complete, unresolved simultaneity of all perspectives.

No Standpoint

Any standpoint would exclude another and collapse the definition

No Preference

Any preference would privilege one cone over the other

No Intention

Intention requires exclusion, which God cannot have

This definition is precise enough to be uncomfortable.

God as Limit Condition

God Cannot...

Choose

Choosing requires preferring one possibility over another

Act

Acting requires having a standpoint from which to act

Intervene

Intervening requires believing some states are better than others

God is not conscious in the way humans are conscious, because consciousness requires exclusion, attention, and foreground.

A Limit Condition

God is closer to a limit condition than an entity.

The boundary within which all partial knowing becomes possible, and beyond which nothing coherent can be said.

This explains why God is always unknowable without mysticism.

Why Religions Fragment

Any claim to know God fully is simply a local perspective mistaking itself for the whole.

Fragment

Each perspective crystallizes into doctrine, believing itself complete

Harden

Defensive structures form to protect the partial truth from dissolution

Reverse

The gyre turns, and what was orthodoxy becomes heresy

Theology is not revelation from above.
Theology is autobiography under pressure.

Suffering Without Redemption

This model does not solve suffering.

It refuses to.

Suffering is not redeemed elsewhere.

It is not justified by a larger plan.

It is what constraint feels like from the inside.

What Is Real

- Loss is real.
- Death is final at the level that matters.
- When a perspective ends, nothing is cosmically restored.

A crossing simply ceases.

Ethics Without Absolution

Meaning does not come from cosmic endorsement.

It comes from responsibility at the point of intersection.

Ethics Is Not...

Obedience to God.

It is care for the viability of future perspectives.

✕ Cruelty

Wrong because it narrows the field

✓ Care

Right because it keeps the gyre open

Choice Remains Real

But bounded.

- I do not choose outcomes in the universe
- I choose which tension resolves through this body

That choice matters precisely because it is local and irreversible.

This is not a comforting God. It does not watch over me. It does not protect me.
It does not guarantee justice.

Growing Up with Authority

I didn't grow up with God as mystery.

I grew up with God as authority.

Even My Parents Deferred

That mattered. If my parents could be wrong, God couldn't be.

Certainty Inherited

Not discovered. You didn't argue with it.
You aligned or you stayed quiet.

Karthik Made It Visible

He knew things: scripture, philosophy, ritual. He spoke with confidence.

God, intelligence, morality, and knowledge collapsed into one figure.

He wasn't trying to dominate. But when someone seems sure, everyone else feels stupid by comparison. That shaped me more than I admit.

Education and Collapse

God didn't fade.
God failed.

Once you understand how belief systems are built, God starts to look like a cultural artifact.

A story with power, not truth.

I wore that clarity like armor.

I thought I had outgrown something childish.

But I Didn't Account for the Residue

Even after God collapsed intellectually, the longing didn't.

- Other people seemed to access something I couldn't
- They prayed. They felt steadied.
- I felt locked out.

God wasn't false anymore.

God was unavailable.

God as Unavailable

Then my life broke.

Not symbolically.

Structurally.

- Meaning drained out
- The things that once worked stopped working
- Performance was the only thing left that felt real
- Everything else felt staged

Only Then

William James appeared.

Not as theory. As permission.

William James as Permission

What James Offered

- He didn't argue for God
- He took experience seriously
- He made it clear that yearning itself mattered

That I hadn't rejected God because I didn't care, but because my mind refused dishonesty while my body kept reaching.

Permission

To take my own experience seriously without needing to justify it to anyone else.

James gave me language for what I was feeling: that the will to believe could be legitimate, that yearning could be a form of knowledge.

Meeting Karthik as Equals

Around the same time, my brother and I finally met each other properly.

Not As...

- The knowledgeable one and the confused one
- Authority and idiot

But As...

- Two people who had both been stripped of certainty
- Two people meeting each other without the old hierarchy

When we started talking seriously, we realized we were circling the same questions from different sides:

What is art?

Why be alive?

To Be Alive Is to Feel Alive

- 1 To be alive is to feel alive
- 2 To feel alive is to grow
- 3 To grow is to go beyond who you are

That landed because it wasn't spiritual. It was practical.

That's Where God Shifted

- God stopped being someone who knew better
- God stopped being something I'd disproved
- God became orientation

Not a being, but a direction.

The pull toward growth when everything else felt fake.

Transcendence as Movement

Transcendence stopped meaning escape.

It became movement.

The Ability

To outgrow the frame I was stuck in

Prayer Changed

From asking for things → asking for strength → responsibility

What Came Out

Readiness. Not optimism. Not surrender.
Presence.

Bring it on.

The willingness to meet whatever comes.

Quiet Magic

Magic still exists here, but it's quiet.

No...

- ✗ Miracles
- ✗ Guarantees

Just...

- ✓ Shifts
- ✓ Rooms changing when I change
- ✓ Life responding differently when I stop armoring myself

Not Control

Participation

- This God doesn't rescue me
- This God doesn't absolve me
- This God doesn't explain my life
- This God demands something harder

What This God Demands

Stay Present

When meaning collapses

Keep Moving

When certainty dies

Take Responsibility

For how I meet the world

If there's faith left in me, it lives here:

In Growth

In Movement

In the Willingness to go beyond who I am

That's the only God I can stand by.

God, as I understand it, is not what resolves the gyre.

God is what makes resolution impossible without collapse.

Everything else is human.
