

Introduction to Storytelling

Raghava KK

Stories are very powerful

People's brains are hardwired to respond to storytelling.

In our everyday lives, personal stories and gossip make up 65% of your conversations.

Humans have been communicating through stories for over 40,800 years.

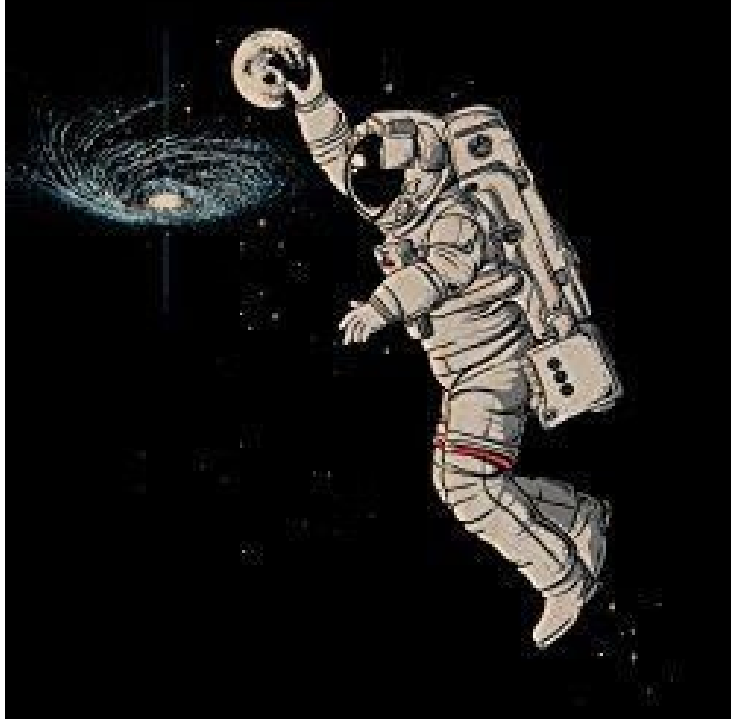

Giving talks is an amazing experience

Makes you think about what matters

Gives you clarity

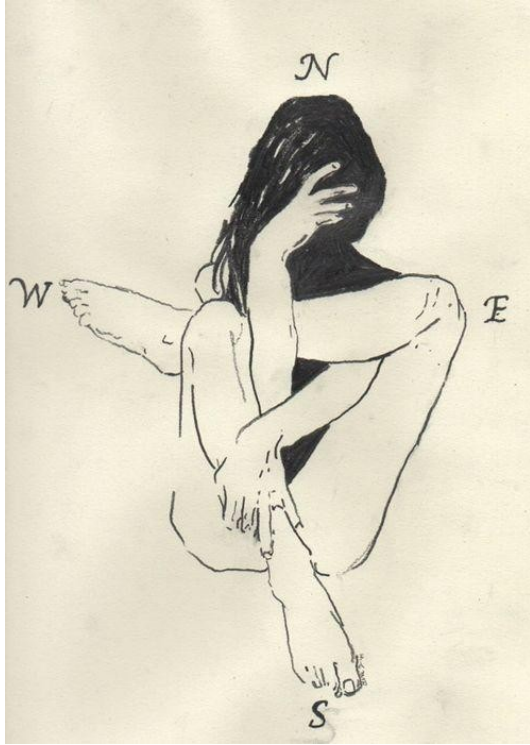

Gives you hope

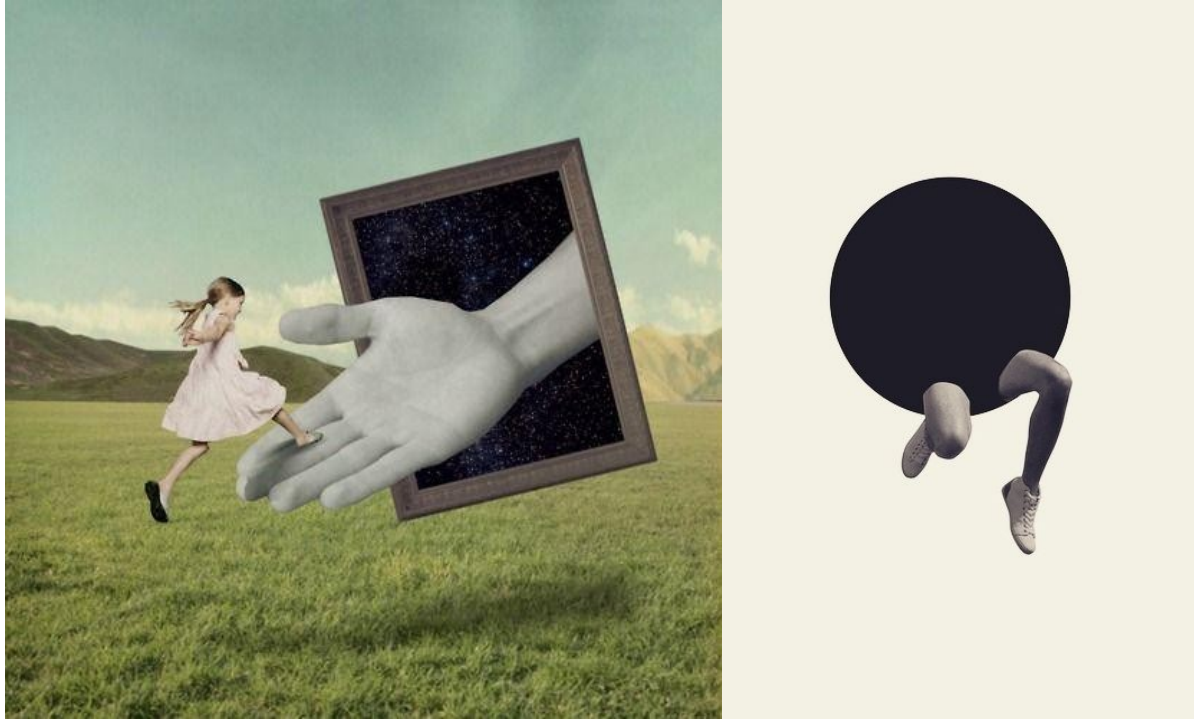

Gives you identity

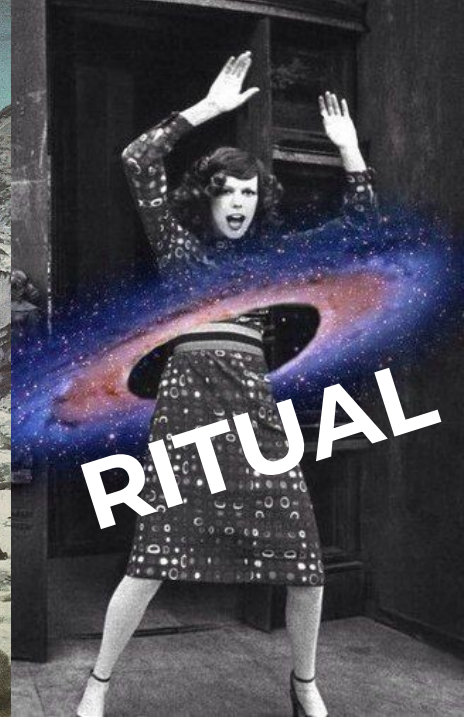

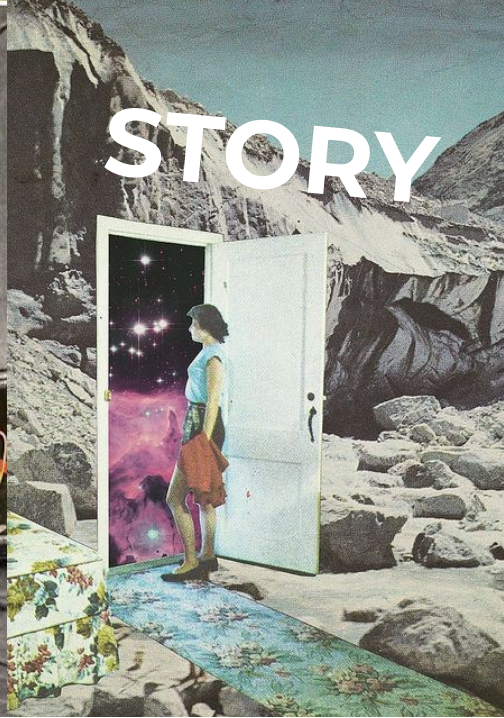

It's painful - but so rewarding at the end

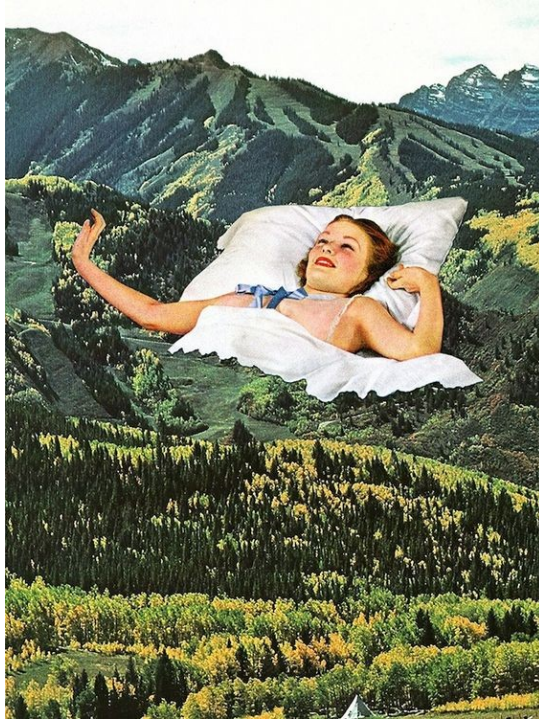

Take the talk beyond the story

Give them a chance to live it and experience it

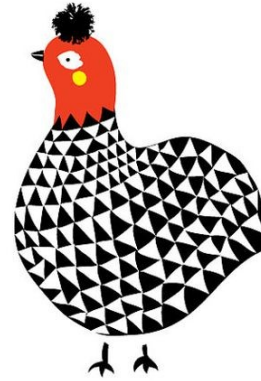

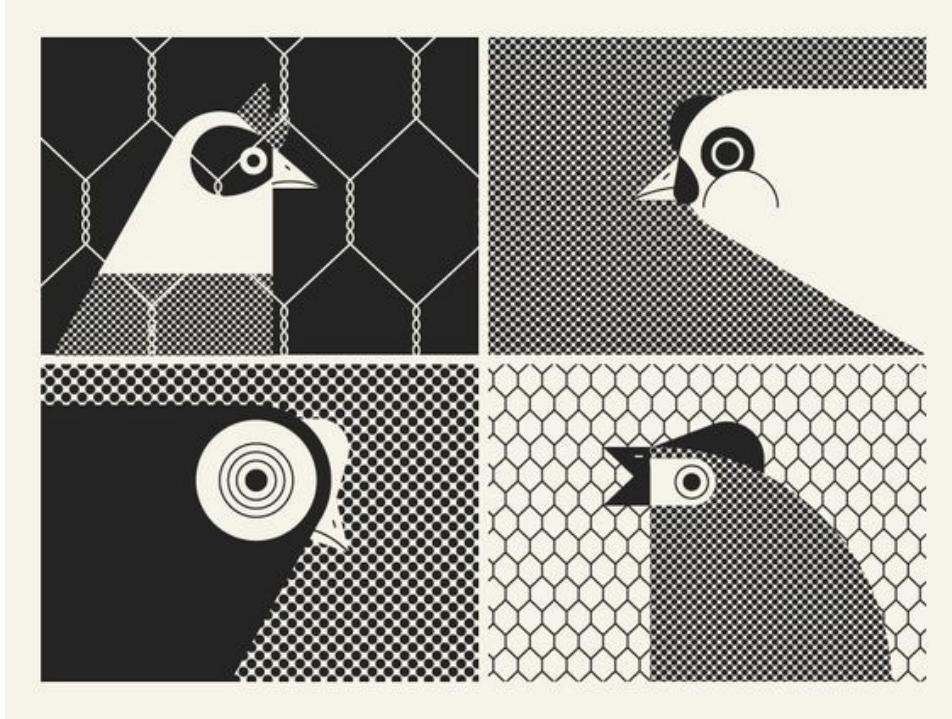

Presentations are powerful - to engage and persuade people

I make talks to ...

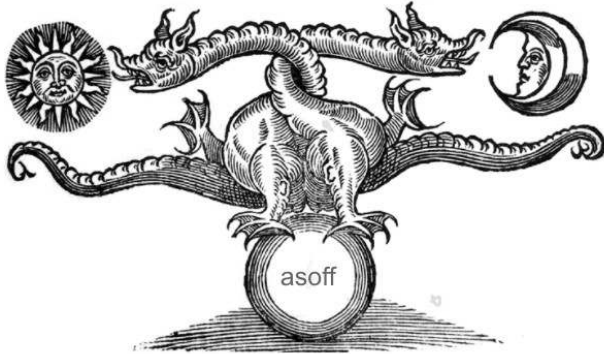

To have or not to have chickens - Rudra's Presentation

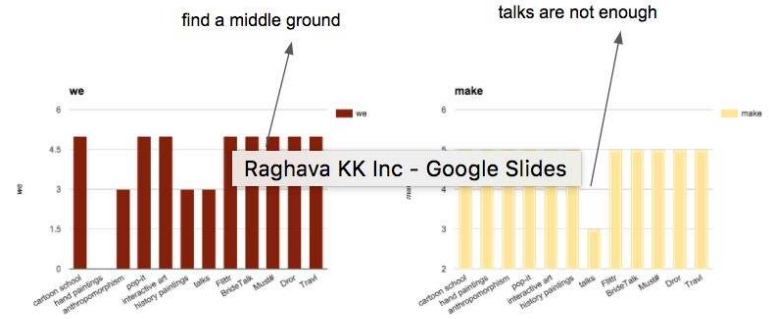

Who am I? What do I like? Where can I be helpful?

Raghava KK

building an eco-system based on a promise

as /of/ for/ from art ↔ life

How my life and art are closely connected

Why do we not understand pictures like we understand words

What is the future of education?

let's shake up education!

For TEDed 2016
@raghavakk

Our 200 year plan

The Creative Imagination

Workshop plan

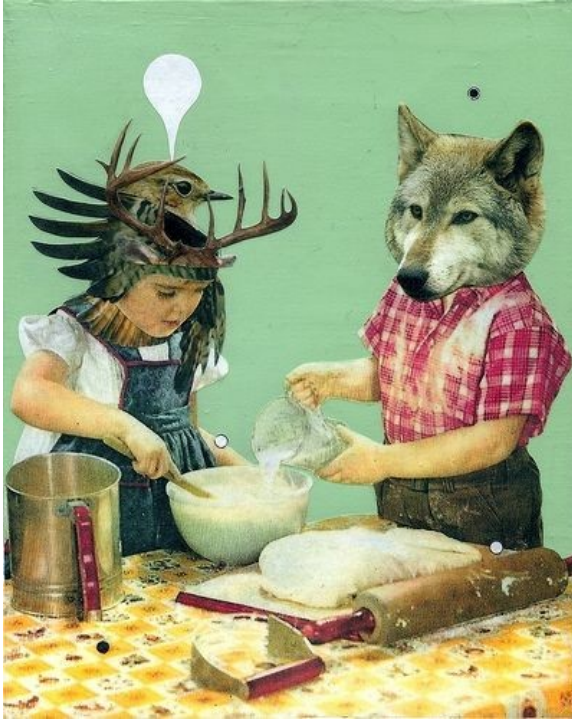

Combination of lectures (1 per week), individual work time, and one-on-one coaching

ONE LECTURE
PER WEEK

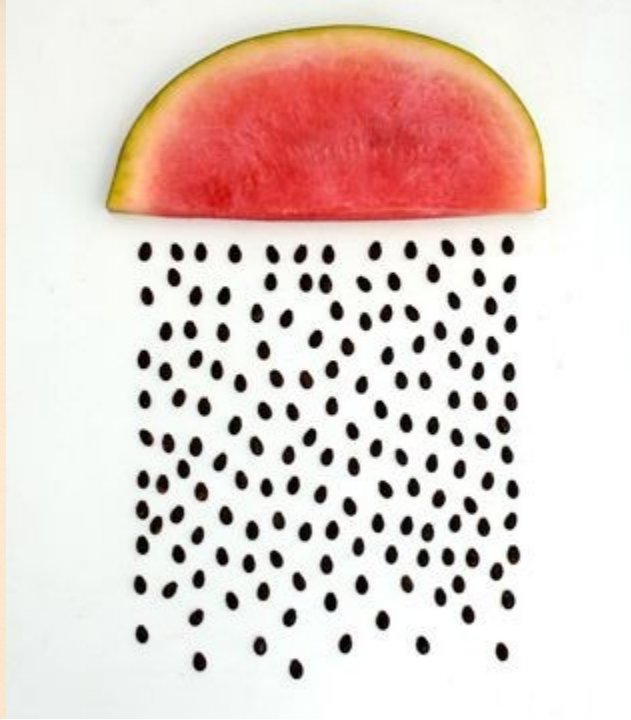

INDIVIDUAL TIME

ONE-ON-ONE
COACHING

What we will learn together - The process

What story to tell

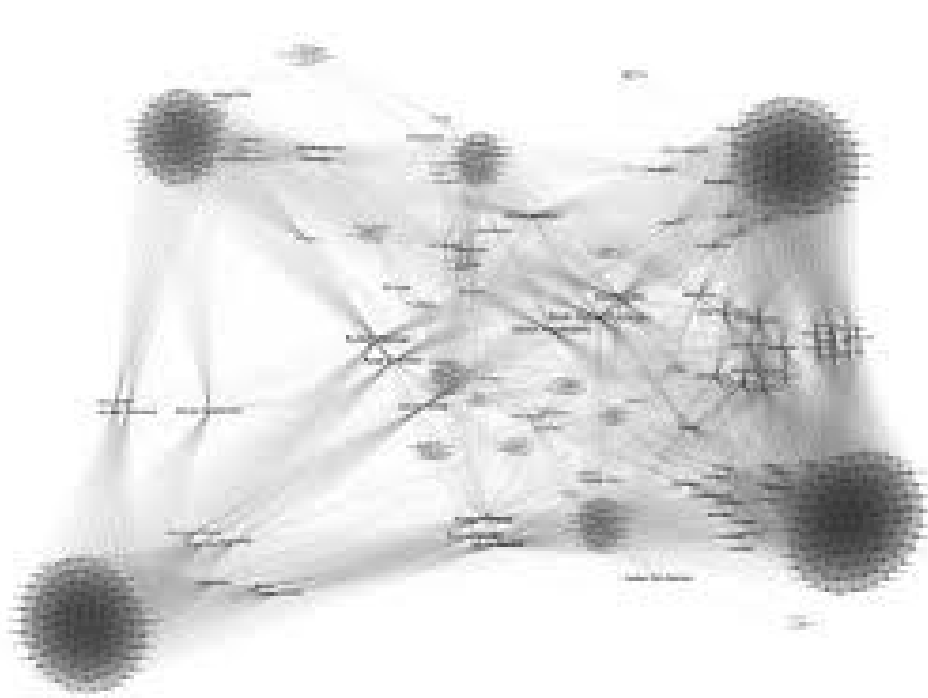

Identify the call to action

how to CREATE A CALL TO ACTION

What people need to know before they can act

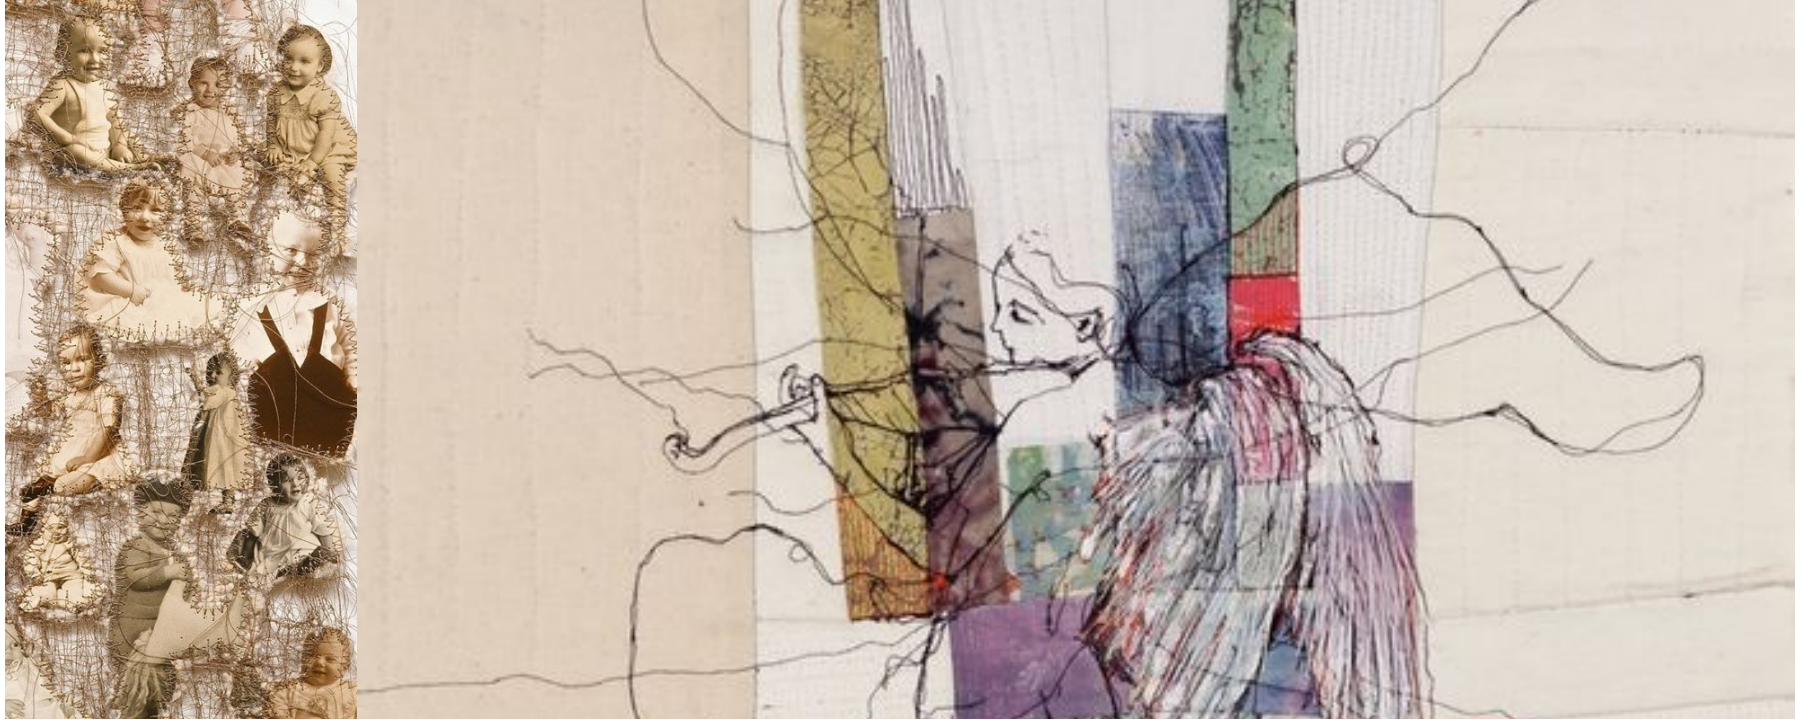

What are the arguments I can use to make my case

Organizing the arguments

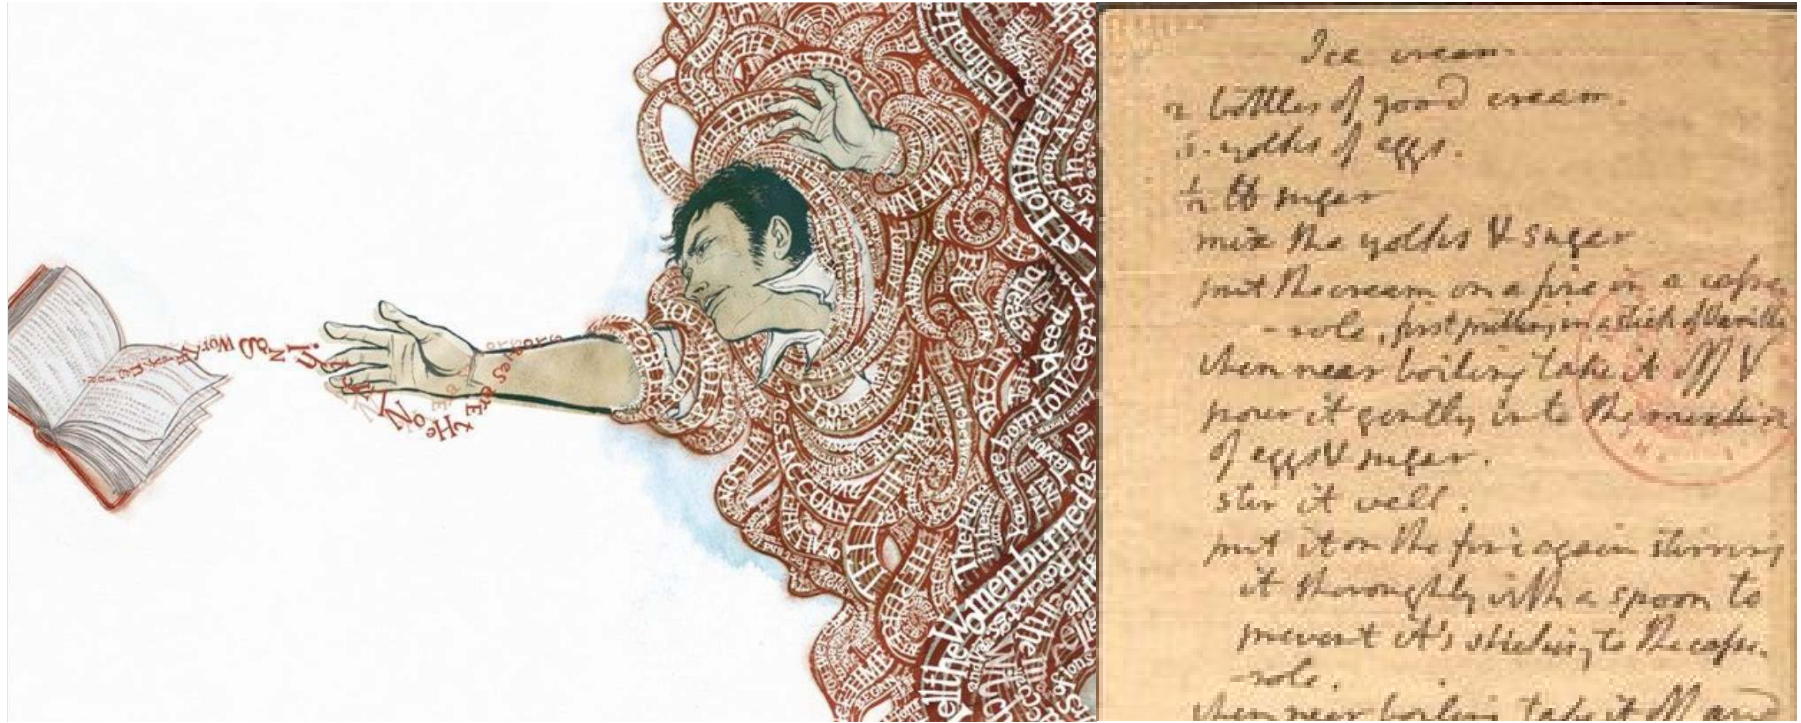

Weave a story from your arguments

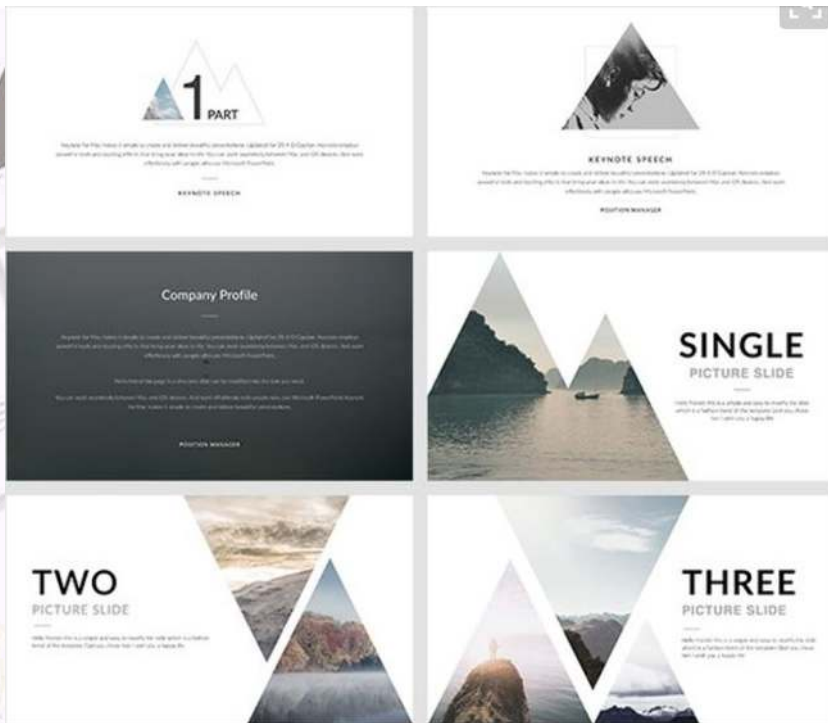

Illustrate each argument with a story

The Script - organized around call to action and theme

The Slides

The Visuals

Practice

Iterate

Time yourself and Practice more

Iterate again

Present to a mock audience

