Un-networking!

a.k.a. true community building

HUMANS ARE THE MOST NON-FUNGIBLE ENTITIES IN THE WORLD

1. Who am I?

What do I want? Know what you want and what you have inherited from others - know what energizes you

2. What's my attitude? Choose your attitude

3. Keep showing up and trying again with your new learnings

Who am I?

Forget it - afterall we may be mythical creatures that can never fully know themselves or each other. That is both our blessing and curse.

You can never “know” who you are - you need to perform it to find out

Change “who am I?” → How am I, me?

Accept by being aware how you feel - this is called knowing who you are

Exercise 1:- sample
Adversities	How did you overcome it?	Which value did it build in you?
Dyslexia	I worked on it when I was older and really keen on learning	Ability to overcome impossible truths about myself - i also used to stammer when I was young
Lack of formal education	By learning all the time and making sure I ask questions watch videos and immerse myself into that world to understand it inside out. May not have depth but have a good overview. I befriended artists from Yale and tried to read literature - speak to my brother and articulate my own thoughts in their language	Ability to learn anything very quickly
	I had to learn from the world as my classroom
Divorce	By believing I could be a better person By believing in unconditional love By talking to my friends By creating art out of it Learning to accept help	My weaknesses and my negative patterns
		My lack of focus on myself and realizing that I have ignored my inner child
		Realising I have issues that needed to be sorted

Exercise 2:
Discoveries	What did you discover?	What was your achievement?	Which value did it build in you?
In art	I discovered that I was good at art	shows, top collectors, celebrity collectors, lots of press, sales,
	My paintings have energy		Larger than life - fun and powerful work
	My paintings are mischievous		Don't take myself too seriously
	My paintings are somewhat biographical		My life creates my work and vice versa
	My art is pleasing to the eye		I want my work to be accessible and move a lot of people
	The meaning in my art comes from thought but the process involves free association		I don't want my works to be direct but sensual
In general	I am good at ideas	ted talk, 64/1, Curation, Futurebets	Ability to articulate thoughts and think big Ability to make a difference in the world
	I love creating authentic creative communities	INK, TED, Fellowships, Mentoring, People I have believed in have done really well for themselves	Ability to bring out the best in people
			Ability to connect with high achievers
			Ability to build a strong community - family like

Us vs Them (not enemies)	How did you overcome it?	Which value did it build in you
The artworld	Tried to learn about it and speak their language Not yet overcome it fully - not sure I want to anymore Not dismissing it but not believing it is the only truth Trying to find my authentic space in the artworld Getting out more and engaging it actively	Humility - have to see myself in perspective Perseverance - have to figure this out and prove them wrong
Snooty academics	Learning about various fields by jumping into them. Attending TED allowed me to understand topics across the board and I could add perspectives to almost any discussion	Articulate my arguments well General knowledge about many fields I see the connection between fields I understand the politics of the self righteous
Rich snobs	Learned how to say no politely and learnt what actions of mine allow me to be perceived as weak and manipulatable. Showed me the need to be more authentic. Allowed me not to treat rich people as different to some extent	What makes me valuable in their eyes How to talk to them Live beyond money
Boring people who live routined lives	I have learnt to respect the mundane and forced myself to live like that for a period of time.
Leftist feminist academics	I have started to date a genderfluid person who has made me respect the left's ideas but i still have an issue with self righteous people. I also struggled to gain the respect of my x-mother in law
Self righteous indian adults		I learnt not to give a fuck
People who treat others like dirt		I have learnt to stand up to bullies and rude assholes
Needy people who always indulge in self pity

What do I want?

Beyond Need → Want

A 100% guaranteed way to lose something you really want

1. Chase it endlessly
2. Force it, trick it, steal it --- at all cost get it.
3. Control it
4. Destroy it
5. Buy it without earning it

1. Ignore it
2. Put it down
3. Beg for it
4. Fight for it

Remember getting trust is different from getting an object. Possession is useless without a real relationship.

A 100% guaranteed way to lose something you really want

INFATUATION/ OBSESSION/ ADDICTION

1. Chase it endlessly
2. Force it, trick it, steal it --- at all cost get it.
3. Control it
4. Destroy it
5. Buy it without earning it

BITTERNESS/ HATE/ FOMO/

1. Ignore it
2. Put it down
3. Beg for it
4. Fight for it

Remember getting trust is different from getting an object. Possession is useless without a real relationship.

I don't need nothin' but I want a whole bunch!

When you want something really badly → it's called being needy

NEVER ACT FROM NEEDINESS!

To want is to human → to want without entitlement is to dream → the creator

To hurt someone's dream is to hurt their craving to live.

So don't hurt them even if you do not want to support them

Beyond Need → Want

Why attitude matters

“Love sought is good but unsought is better”

Twelfth Night, Shakespeare

Avoid operating from negative emotions:

Expectations →

Fear →

Insecurity →

Anger →

Judgement →

Entitlement →

Validation →

Greed →

WHAT TO DO WITH BAD FEELINGS THAT WILL ARISE FOR EVERYONE

Expectations → surprises

Fear → awe and curiosity

Insecurity → acceptance

Anger → love

Judgement → boundaries drawn with grace and love

Entitlement → gratitude

Validation → of self

Greed → acceptance

What's your attitude?

How you do something → your personality/ your personal values

Make a list of your values and spend time understanding them better → constantly refining them - trying experiments with them and updating them. That is how you become an expert on you!

The small- big differences that make all the difference!

Networking

VS

Community building

Done with agenda

Done with intention

Conscious or unconscious score kept

Conscious or unconscious score erased

Individual benefit or system benefit

Individual and Systemic benefit (or taking turns)

Transaction → give <, >, = take

Pay it forward → give when you have and take when you need.

Win or lose

Now or later?

Entitlement due to "rules"

Gratitude or disappointment - but zero entitlement

Rules/ Laws dictate

Rules and Laws offer safety net

Rewards comes in tangible forms

Reward comes from the existence and nurturing of the community

Avoid surprises

Surprises are welcomed but considered

My next best version of me

What makes me proud of me?

In all the different aspects of life.

Try to be skeptical of anything that may be inherited from negative emotions

(To be completely honest - this only works in difficult times → the step above this is to accept yourself and accept your wants and be mature enough to know when you are acting from need and when you are acting from want. Need gets more attention short term but leaves a very poor impression of you and your abilities long term.)

The fractal never sacrifices the particular in favor of the universal popular attitudes people have to their lives

Ones that want to be told who they can/should be

- The Warrior

Those who choose to find out for themselves

- The Mystic

Those that choose based on context and intention

- The Dancer

Introspection

*Set aside one whole hour of the day to do absolutely nothing.
Just live with your thoughts and yourself.*

Keep showing up!

Remember → You never fail even if your actions, thoughts, intentions, projects, relationships do.
