

A Visual Essay of The Creation Of The
Toy Trojan, 2020

Raghava KK

CONTENTS

SOURCING OF THE WOOD	2 - 5
DESIGNING THE SCULPTURE	6 - 13
DETAILS (CHARACTERS)	14 - 25
PAINTING THE SCULPTURE	26 - 31
FINAL SCULPTURE	32 - 33

Sourcing of the wood:

Figure 1 :

Finding a single piece of wood to carve the main foundation of the sculpture - A 300 year old Mahogany tree from the tropical rainforests of Java.

Figure 2 & 3: A traditional ritual of praying to the Gods to preserve the knowledge and wisdom of the 300 year old tree.

Figure 4: 30 workers source the wood to transport to the studio.

Figure 5: It takes almost 16 people to transport the logs of wood across a 3 kilometre damp paddy field to the studio.

Designing the sculpture

Figure 6 :

Initial studies of the horse –
pencil sketches.

Figure 7: The initial mood sketch done on paper with ink to communicate the expression of the sculpture.

Figure 8: A crude formation of the sculpture is carved out of the main log of wood.

Figure 9: Sanding the main formation of the sculpture to create a smooth surface.

Figure 10: The main foundation of the sculpture is ready.

Figure 11: Digital sketch of the characters on an image of the main foundation.

Figure 12: Chalk sketch of the details on the sculpture foundation for carving.

Figure 13: Details of the sculpture after carving.

Details (Characters)

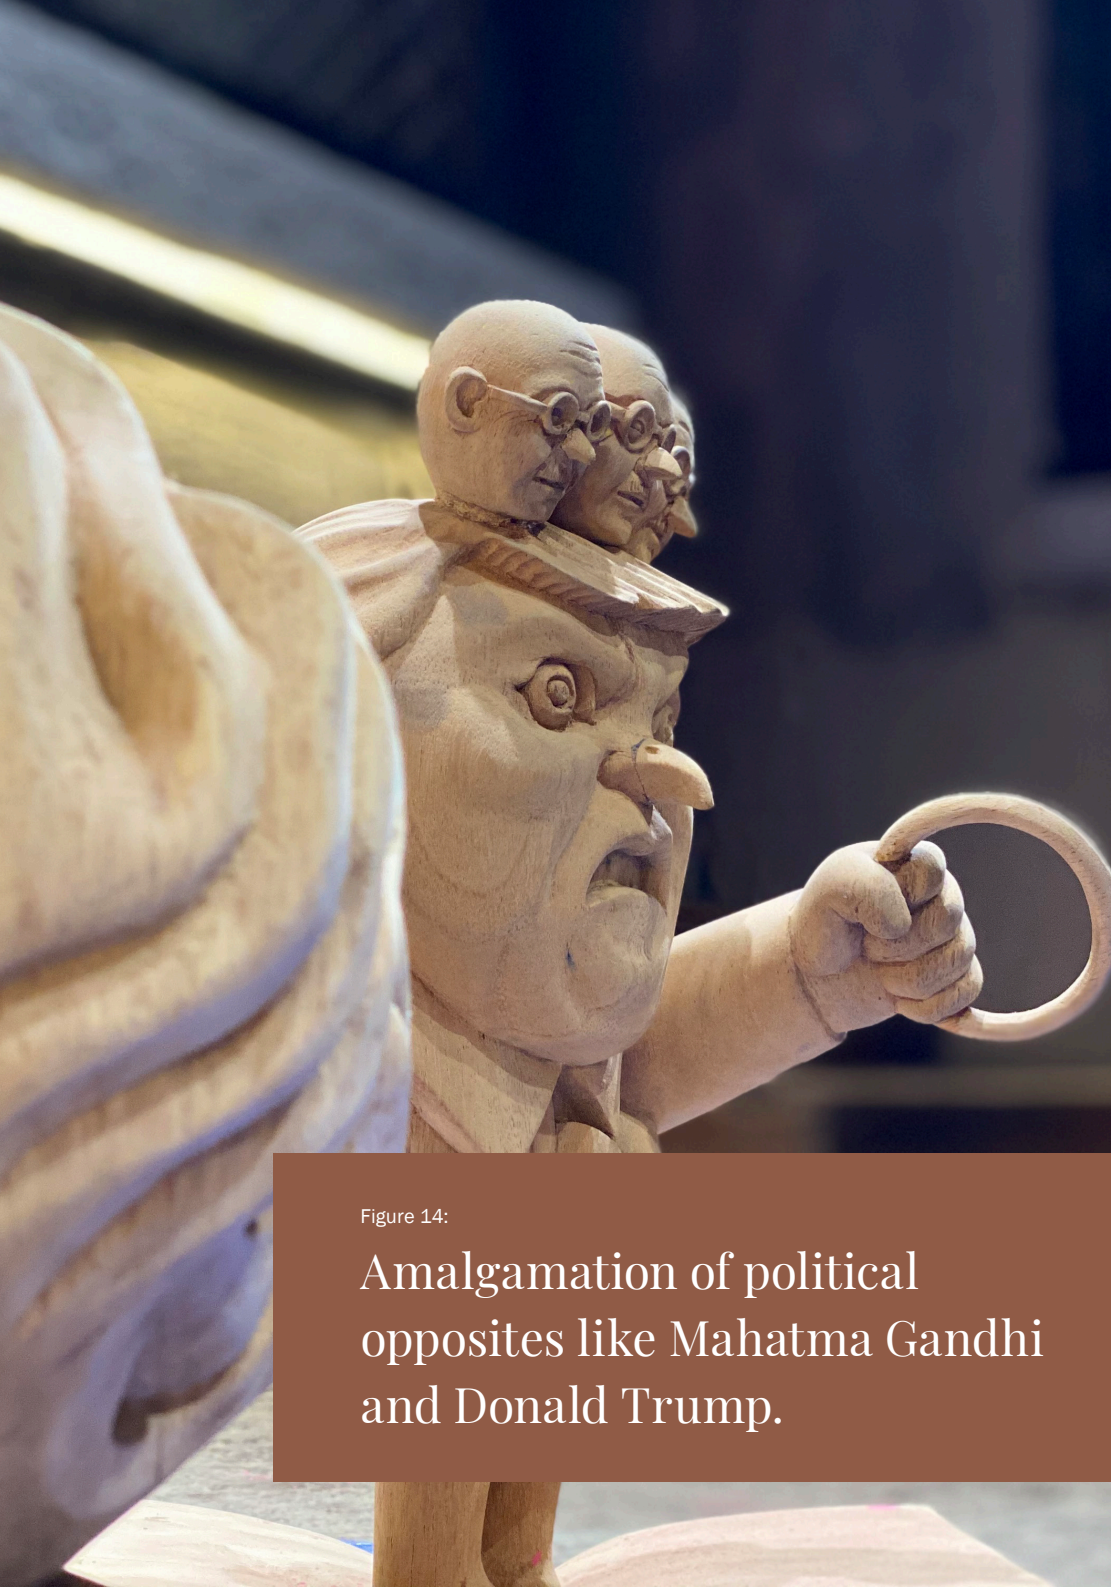

Figure 14:

Amalgamation of political opposites like Mahatma Gandhi and Donald Trump.

Figure 15: The man from Picasso's Guernica who's fleeing the site of violence.

Figure 16: Kim Jong-un

Figure 17: Frog Mario from the game Super Mario Bros. 3

Figure 18: The Irony of using Mahatma Gandhi on a currency note.

Figure 19: Snowdrake from the game Undertale.

Figure 20: The Birthing of the Phoenix from the pith of the stomach.

Figure 21: Death and hell lurks below.

Figure 22: The Crown Jewel of the Trojan, its imagination, its future and the narrative that it's creating.

Figure 23: The Garuda.

Figure 24: Miegospel from the game Undertale.

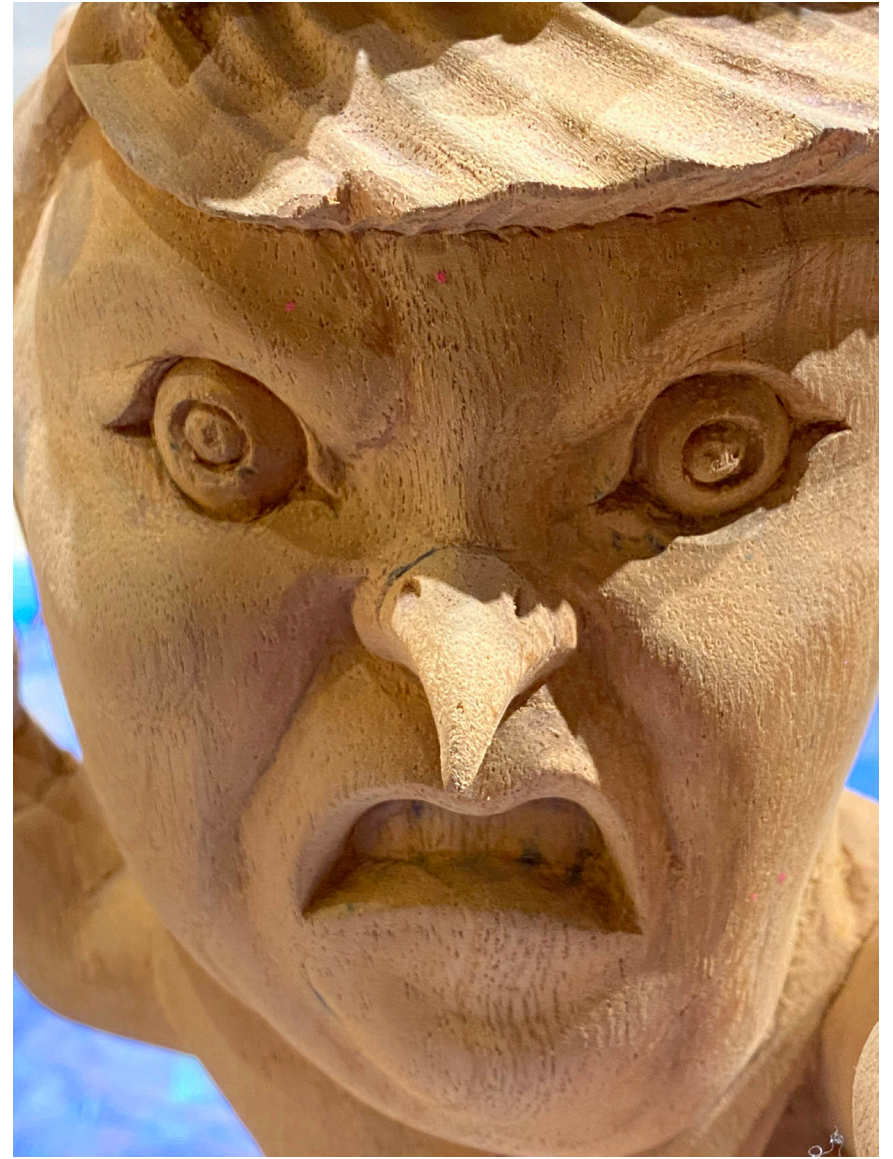

Figure 25: Political characters that are inspired by unusual combinations.

Painting the sculpture

Figure 26 :

Priming the wood to absorb the first layer of paint – a dark layer is used to bring out the bright hue of pink.

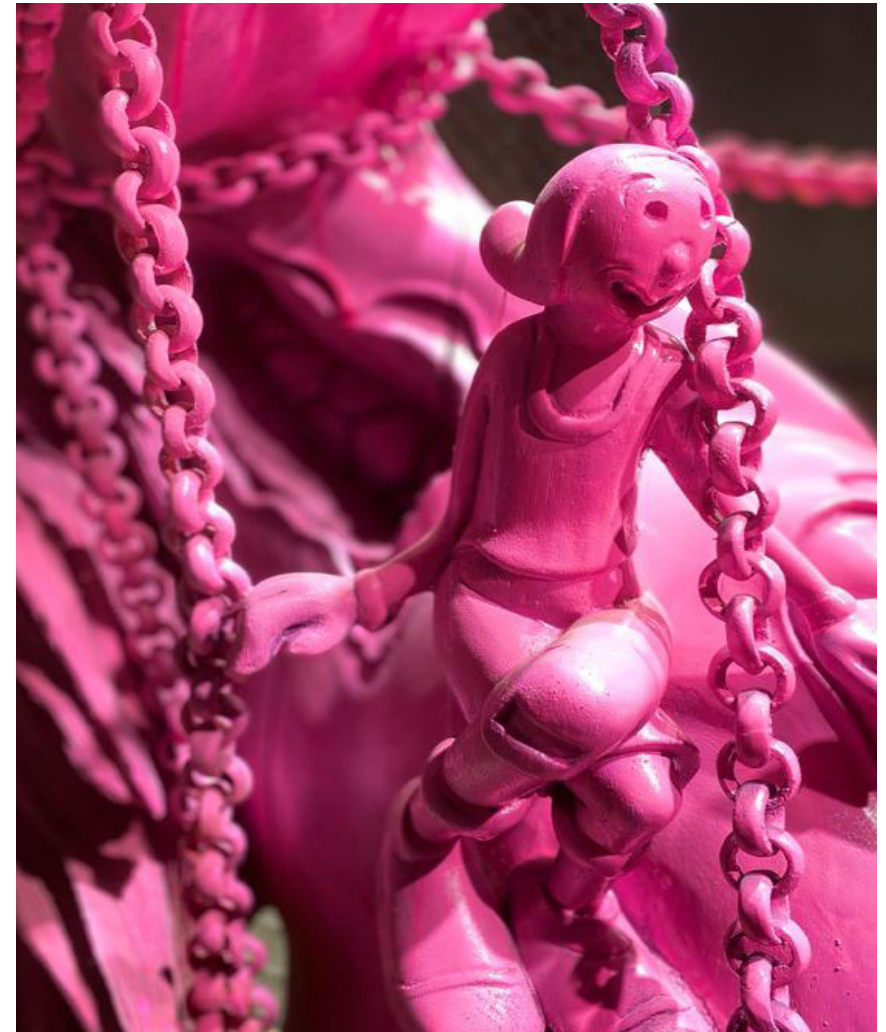

Figure 27: Olive Oyl, a cartoon character from Popeye and painting the the top half of the sculpture to look like a toy.

Figure 28 The Rise of the Cyborg Age - The Future: The loss and liberation that comes from it.

Figure 29 Digital test of colors on the wood.

Figure 30: Bottom view of the Rising of the Phoenix.

Figure 31: Reference made to Francis Bacon.

Figure 32: Even cartoon characters reveal a skeleton underneath.

Figure 33: Bottom view of the unfinished work.

Figure 34: Digital render of the painted sculpture to indicate coloring.